

Students Study Music From Manhattan

Posted: Monday, October 14, 2013 6:50 pm

Technology is helping Neligh-Oakdale students make some noteworthy improvements.

Through distance-learning classes, 20 band and choir students are taking specialized lessons from instructors in New York City. Seven teachers from the Manhattan School of Music (MSM) instruct the classes.

"The MSM lessons give our students in rural Nebraska a chance to take instrumental and vocal lessons from some expert teachers in New York City," said Nate

Metschke, Neligh-Oakdale band and choir director. "It's great to expose them to someone who is so specialized in their area."

See this week's print edition of the Neligh News and Leader for the full story.

Manhattan Students

Neligh-Oakdale vocalists use long-distance learning to study music.

Posted: Monday, October 14, 2013 6:50 pm